Regional Office Roll-Out

Chance Voight Investment Corporation Limited (Chance Voight) today announced that its wholly owned funds management subsidiary, Chance Voight Investment Partners Limited, is currently trialling a high-tech regional office concept in New Zealand, which it is considering deploying through the establishment of regional offices across New Zealand and Australia.

Chance Voight considers that there is potential to establish up to 150 of these low-cost, high-tech offices for which premises and highly visual building naming rights are readily available.

The purpose of establishing regional offices (with the associated signage rights) throughout New Zealand and Australia is to enable Chance Voight's investor relations personnel to efficiently engage with investors in Chance Voight's various funds, in the best possible manner.

Chance Voight's CEO, Bernard Whimp, said:

"There is no doubt that good investor relationships are the cornerstone of a successful funds management business. Chance Voight aims to be 'best in class' when it comes to providing fund investors with a deeply satisfying investment experience".

"It is Chance Voight's aim to take investor engagement to new heights in New Zealand and to produce and offer financial products which incorporate the best structures on an informed view of risk and reward".

"As a firm, we are convinced that much of the financial product currently available from mainstream participants in New Zealand is structured to produce average outcomes and Chance Voight will be aiming to make the returns enjoyed by many investors in overseas jurisdictions, available to New Zealanders".

"It is somewhat puzzling, when you contemplate the very good returns enjoyed by numerous Australian equities fund investors, as to why those returns are not generally available to investors in this country. We will be working to fix that".
